

RECIPRO brings together female executives to collaborate and compete together to accelerate personal and business success.

Cited by Harvard Business Review as one of the breakthrough ideas for 2006, peer learning provides leaders with a confidential environment to talk about their issues, get ideas, input and support from a group of people in a similar situation.

Executive Learning Groups for Women

Connect with between six and eight executive peers from a diverse range of non-competitive businesses and backgrounds from across Ireland. Compete together in an intimate and trusted environment to accelerate your personal and business success. Our Executive Learning Groups are professionally facilitated by an expert coach with executive business experience.

The program includes:

- Quarterly, full day session where group members get objective feedback, practical ideas and valuable strategies on relevant personal challenges and business issues.
- Monthly, 90 minute teleconference to hold each other accountable for progress with vision, goals and actions;
- A full day kick off event is also included where the group designs its own group principles and builds high levels of trust and commitment.
